Evening of April 3, 2012

Quote of the Day:

“All of this is part of a PC commitment to infrastructure that that allows communities across this province to thrive,” said Redford. “The contrast between that and what we’re hearing from other political parties is that when you start talking about taking $2 billion out of the existing budget, about taking half a billion dollars out of the Municipal Sustainability Initiative, you start to impact community development. It’s a fundamental choice that Albertans will have to make.”

A Fact Worth Knowing:

Alberta’s infrastructure support is 38% higher than the average of what other provinces have been spending – about $1500 per capita.

News Today:

Redford: Infrastructure commitments allow communities to thrive: “These aren’t just campaign promises, these projects are in place and are proceeding,” said Redford of a long-planned redevelopment of Medicine Hat Regional Hospital where demolition is taking place, a recently announced highway overpass at Dunmore Road, a planned K-9 public school in South Ridge and money for long-term care facility, that is currently out to tender.

Alberta Tories tout Medicine Hat as model of growing public needs: The Tories have allocated more than $16 billion over the next three years on infrastructure, a third of which will go directly to municipalities. Funding has also been put on predictable three-year cycles for schools and municipalities to allow for better planning.

Redford touts Medicine Hat as model of managed growth: Premier Alison Redford says the southern Alberta city of Medicine Hat is the best example of how her party is growing the province.

Alberta Election 2012: Balanced NDP budget would hike oilsands royalties, cut taxes for small businesses: The NDP would bring stability to the budget, balancing it within a year by increasing oil sands royalties and taxes on the rich, while also increasing services and decreasing taxes on small businesses, leader Brian Mason said Tuesday.

Campaign continues for major parties throughout Alberta: Progressive Conservative Leader Alison Redford was in southern Alberta Tuesday, trying to shore up support for her party in southeast Alberta. She started her day in Medicine Hat, but at an appearance in Taber later on, Redford pledged that a PC government would make it possible for Albertans to renew their prescriptions – without having to visit their doctor.

Alberta Election 2012: Alberta's deadliest highway becomes an election issue: Plans to fully twin the road have been in the works for years, but progress has been slow, a point the local Wildrose candidates have been using to attack the Progressive Conservatives.
